This graphic depicts a very generalized land status for Alaska from June of 2002. It was prepared by NRCS from land status information contained in the interim Land Information system (ILIS) residing at the Bureau of Land Management, Alaska State Office. It does not properly reflect land conveyances that may have occurred from the State of Alaska to municipalities, or to individuals through land sales. Resolution of the information is also limited to 640 acres (section based). If more than two interests occurred in a section of land, then only one owner is shown. For instance, in the case where both private land and a Native corporation selection occurred in the same section of land, the status of that section would be shown as "Native selected". Therefore the depiction of private land is drastically under-represented. Persons interested in official land status information should consult the US BLM Master Title Plats, State of Alaska Master Title Plats, and other documentation available at local recording offices.
